Randy the Raccoon

Randy was a raccoon who loved to play in the Forest. One day, Randy's Family was sleeping in their hollow tree. This was their home. Randy's mom said they would need to move soon because it was getting too cold to live in this hollow tree. Randy and his brother spent that entire day looking for a new home. Randy was very excited to move because he did not like to be cold while he slept. He looked in caves, he looked in houses, he looked everywhere. When it started to get dark, Randy walked home, knowing he'd have to look tomorrow. On his way home, he saw a small cave that looked perfect for his Family's den. He ran straight home to let his Family know about the cave.

Raccoons

Raccoons are small mammals that live mostly in North America. They have a very special look. The raccoon is often called the "masked bandit" because it has a stripe of black fur across its eyes. Raccoons are part of the bear family, but they are much smaller than a normal bear. Most raccoons live in forests, but some have come to cities and farms. They're very smart animals, so they are able to adapt to live in different places. One thing that makes them survive in different places is that they will eat almost anything. They dig for food.
