Ladybugs are an example of a type of insect. These insects come in all different colors, but the most popular species is the ladybug with red and black spots.

passages

Ladybugs can be found almost everywhere in the world, except for very cold spots. These insects are actually considered to be a beetle because of its hard shell. They eat little insects that eat plants, so they are useful to humans. They are sometimes pests to humans though, because they show up inside their homes uninvited.
