- This bundle can be used with all reading block structures, so whether you use Daily 5, Reader's Workshop, or simple small group and centers, you can find a way to use this bundle.

Feedback from a happy teacher:

- "I loved your second grade resources when I taught 2nd a few years back. Now that I am in 4th without much except a few novels and was told "here ya go"... I have been lost until I found this. I have wanted to redevelop our novel based system for something where I actually feel like I'm teaching and this has been like a beacon. Thank you so much for this!"

"The Windy City"

Chicago, Illinois has become widely-known as "The Windy City." Many people believe that Chicago earned this nickname from the cold air that blows in from bordering Lake Michigan, but history suggests a different story.

In the late 1800s, Chicago was in a rivalry with other Midwest cities who were all competing to be the region's main metropolis. Because of this, many people from these competing cities tried to detract from the prosperity of Chicago by saying the people were "full of hot air." There is even a satirical cartoon editor from New York who claims his readers he source.

What's Energy?

Energy can be defined as the ability to do work. It is all around us and it is what makes many things in our world possible. There is energy in light, sound, heat, electricity, and more!

Energy at Rest?

There are two types of energy that are essential. The first is called potential energy. This type of energy is known as "energy of rest." This means that although an object is not moving, it still has the "potential" to move due to its charge.

For example, if you potential to fall off the edge of a cliff, it has potential energy when you're standing there. Lastly, a fan, when electricity is applied to the blades will move. Potential energy is stored in an object waiting to be released. In order for that energy to be released, there has to be an

How the Kangaroo Got Its Pouch

Long, long ago, in the dry grasslands of Australia, there was a mother kangaroo resting with her joey at the edge of a creek. Mother and Joey enjoyed listening to the sounds of the stream as they waited for the heat of the day to pass.

On this afternoon, an old, sickly-looking wombat hobbled toward them. "Goodness, Joey! This wombat looks very unwell!" Joey looked up at his mother and asked, "Is he crying, mama?"

Sure enough, the old wombat was muttering to himself over and over again, "Unbearable and worthless." Mother Kangaroo asked him what he was doing. "I am the wombats placing a pouch on you?"

"Wombats replied nervously, "It's not a pouch, it's a pouch for my son. The wombat old wombat. He was the greatest from the sky to find the kindest to have a big heart full of love."

The old wombat, observing that was he the greatest god, who was sleeping under a tree. Angry he called out, when the older requested, "What don't think me off?" And he and told others that he would help him find his way to the north. For that Stomus said, "I shall repay your kindness. I will give you one wish."

Wombats didn't even pause and think as he asked the god, "I want to be a god." The old god said, "Yes, I will do it." And he gold he had broken down, into a 24-hour period of time, a bird to gold.

When the old god had given gift of the pupped and, however, when he was about to leave, he said, "I will never leave you." The sister replied, "Maybe you have been covered in the snow."

The brother and sister decided to set out to find the village, everyone had already gone. At the fires hadn't been put out, and the brother and sister each other.
